Whilst all this was flourishing, a man ln Harrisburg, Pa., conceived the idea of testing the effect of the vigor. Perhaps he intended to make the policy look as ridiculous as it was. So he got printed, in the office of the Union and Patriot, a hand-bill calling on the darkies to meet and form themselves into companies, battalions, reg'ments, &c., and advertising Jim Lane to be on hand to superintend the patriotic demonstration. Straight away white men became indignant, and assumed that the object was the United States; from entering the service.

The accusation was a libel, of course. The whole pretended meeting and the presence of Jim Lane were fabrications that eived nobody. The object was in this the following exemptions: way to bring home to the minds of the people of Pennsylvania the folly and absurdity of arming the negroes in this contest.

enemy's advance.

The rebels under Jackson and Ewell had crossed the Rapidan In force, and their advance guard, fifteen thousand strong, was attacked by Banks yesterday evening about six miles south of Culpepper Courthouse. The fight was almost wholly with artillery, at first; but the infantry became engaged about six o'clock, and a determined and bloody contest ensued. Banks' right wing, under General Williams, suffered severely. The rebel position was in the woods, while same age, belonging to the family. [Correspondence of the New York Times.] THE RECONNOISSANCE BY GEN. CHAWFORD TO OBANGE COURTHOUSE. OBANGE COURTHOUSE, VA.

Saturday, August 2, 1862-3 P. M. My last letter-the letter of this mornng-was dated at Raccoon Ford, Rapidam As I suspected, we did not move from that point until near daylight this morning. We then moved directly upon finding no pickets until withn six miles of the town, the streets of which are the most crooked and muddy we have yet encountered in a Virginia town. The pickets, as soon as seen, were driven in without loss to us, and very soon afterward we came upon the signal corps I before spoken of, stationed on the heights to the right of the road, with signals dying. As soon as we came in sight. they were flying, too, and finally escaped. From that point to Orange we saw nothing more of the enemy. We entered the town with a portion of our force, the advance citizen subject to military duty to bear his being Col. DeForrest's Fifth New York Cavalry, while two companies of the First Vermont were sent round to the right in order to take position on the other side. Dividing and passing through the town through the main and an adjoining parallel street, (if any two things here can be ealled paraliel to each other, ) we had reached the further and outermost edge of the town before coming upon the enemy. There our advance of the Fifth New York Cavairy was fired upon, Gen. Crawford and Col. DeForrest being immediately ln the rear of on the Tazewell road, on the night of the 25th ult., in your issue of the 30th. Your informant was mistaken en irely. Lieut. Col. Kegwin, of the Forty-ninth Indiana. continued for a brief period with considerable effect on both sides. At length a movement of the enemy induced our force to move in the direction of the river, and the rebels taking it for a retreat, returned and followed until upon the edge of the town looking toward Culpepper, when the Vermont cavalry, having reached the enemy's rear, and our advance getting serent hospitals, and who are able to join them out of town, and in range, charged their regiments, will be relieved of such upon them, and they ran for the woods to the right of the place where the charge commenced, and disappeared. We took forty-two prisoners. We lost in the engage-

> Colonel, fought bravely, as they usually do -and twelve men wounded, of the several portions of regiments of cavalry engaged. The only fault I have heard, found, or feel like finding myself with Gen. Crawford is that, in order to see personally and generally superintend the movements of the force, he exposed himself too often, and, from his position, too enspicuously, to the fire of the enemy. This, I think, was particularly the case when he received information which induced him to believe that the First Vermont had been but off.
> On the receipt of the information he dashed forward by a circuitous route, with a small force, to their rescue. As it proved, he
